Welcome to the Fifth Annual CREA International Conference hosted by the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. As one of the original land-grant universities, our missions of scholarship, teaching and engagement are built on the foundational principles of access, equity and justice as cornerstones of educational opportunity.

The theme of CREA’s Fifth International Conference, “Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method and Practice: Moving Beyond Nominal Categories and False Dichotomies in Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment”, addresses one of the pressing challenges of helping our societies address inequity and marginalization. How do we develop more comprehensive strategies and systemic approaches to meet the needs of those in our society who must live in the intersection of multiple sources of inequality and unequal access? This is no simple challenge and it requires solutions that can match the complexity of the human condition.

The conversations, discussions and debates that you have this week will catalyze new and deeper understanding of how we can all have a more positive influence on the lives of our students and help us to build a stronger and more sustainable future for all of higher education.

On behalf of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, it is my pleasure to welcome all of you to this fifth year of the International CREA Conference. I wish you a productive and successful conference.

Sincerely,

Robert J. Jones
Chancellor
University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign
On behalf of the College of Education and the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, I welcome you to the Fifth International Conference of the Center for Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment (CREA). This year’s theme, “Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method and Practice: Moving Beyond Nominal Categories and False Dichotomies in Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment”, is especially timely as researchers, analysts, historians, administrators, and policymakers seek a better understanding of cultural diversity, context, and differences in our racial society, especially in a world that continues to experience racial, religious, and sexual orientation tensions.

The College, an early proponent of diversity and inclusion, established CREA in 2011 with a goal to more substantively promote the relevance of culture and cultural context in educational research, particularly in the areas of evaluation and assessment. Today we are compelled to think seriously regarding long-term solutions that can bring an end to persistent problems that have continued to plague our society nationally and globally. CREA continues to forge alliances and to build new collaborations in educational research, evaluation, and assessment that remains unique among its peers.

The International CREA Conference, brings together an interdisciplinary group of scholars, researchers, and practitioners from around the world to engage in discourse that expands on theories and applications through professional development, learning, training, and collaborative discoveries in the field. The conference has welcomed attendees from the U.S. (including Hawaii and Alaska), Africa, Asia, Australia, Canada, Europe (particularly Ireland), New Zealand, and Indigenous nations.

It is my hope that this year’s conference will continue to provide the enriched intellectual and interdisciplinary space for impactful dialogue that challenges us collectively to aggressively move toward innovative ways to educate our next generation. I believe that while the life experiences of conference attendees will have substantive differences, there will also be also similarities. Yet this conference may also be a vehicle that transcends barriers to our mutual understandings as a socially responsible and dynamic professional development opportunity.

I wish you an enjoyable and productive conference.

Shaping the future since 1867

A land grant institution established in 1867, the University of Illinois has a long record of commitment to public engagement and to the discovery and application of knowledge. The 2017 year marked the sesquicentennial anniversary of the University of Illinois.

About the CREA

The Center for Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment (CREA) was created in 2011 with a primary mission of generating evidence for policy making that is not only methodologically but also culturally and contextually defensible.

In today’s pluralistic societies, to achieve valid and actionable conclusions from research and evaluation studies, inquirers must have a substantive understanding of the character and influences of diverse cultural norms and practices. As an interdisciplinary center, CREA brings together researchers from across the globe to address the vital need for policy-relevant studies that foreground the cultural and contextual dimensions of inquiry findings on the quality and effectiveness of social and educational interventions. CREA serves as a vehicle to engage in rigorous evaluation, assessment, research, practice, and meaningful dialogue relative to our schools and particularly those schools that serve large enrollments of children who are poor and/or from culturally diverse backgrounds. CREA is directed by Dr. Stafford Hood, Sheila M. Miller Professor of Education and Professor of Curriculum & Instruction and Educational Psychology.

CREA is located in the College of Education at the University of Illinois. Fulfilling its intent to continually expand its scope in the U.S., internationally, and in indigenous communities CREA has established formal partnerships. Dublin City University’s School of Education Studies became our first formal partner in 2012 when it established a CREA sister office, headed by Professor and Head of School Dr. Joe O’Hara and Professor of Education, Dr. Gerry McNamara focusing on the educational experiences of “new immigrant” students in Irish schools. In 2016 CREA - Hawaii was formally established with its mission being “to use a Native Hawaiian lens to offer empowering, values-based evaluation approaches that support insights and conclusions which, in turn, promote equity and justice in the diversity that is Hawai‘i.” CREA is substantively enriched by these partnerships and those that will be established in the future.

About the College of Education

Founded in 1905, the College of Education at the University of Illinois is dedicated to facilitating and improving the learning process within the context of challenging educational settings, not just within our building or across campus, but throughout the nation and the world. Today the College has four academic departments that serve more than 1600 students: Curriculum and Instruction; Educational Psychology; Education Policy, Organization and Leadership; and Special Education. All departments offer master’s and doctoral degrees, and Special Education and Curriculum and Instruction offer undergraduate degrees for early childhood and elementary teachers, as well as a secondary education minor. As a top-ranked institution, our breakthrough scholarship addresses many of today’s priorities, and our graduates join more than 34,000 College of Education alumni to become the next generation of teacher leaders and influential professors, administrators, and policy makers.

Welcome from Stafford Hood, Director & Rodney Hopson, Associate Director

Dear CREA Family, Friends, and Colleagues:

Welcome to Chicago, IL and particularly our 5th International Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment conference: “Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method and Practice: Moving Beyond Nominal Categories and False Dichotomies in Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment!”

Much like the inaugural international conference in 2013, focused on repositioning culture and cultural context in evaluation, and all subsequent conferences (II – IV), this fifth international conference addresses ways to reposition the study of cultural responsiveness in assessment and evaluation within the context of “intersectionality as critical inquiry”. We direct this discourse towards the next generation of the field, while continuing our efforts in translating our practices and theories to action.

The 2019 conference promises to be no different in contributing to theories of practices in intersectionality in evaluation and assessment. From our opening keynote to the closing luncheon keynote, CREA V is jam-packed with pre-conference workshops, paper presentations, symposia, and roundtables that push our engagement as well as understanding the conference’s theme. We are fortunate to welcome an impressive lineup of international and renowned speakers, presenters, returning and newcomers to CREA, evaluation and assessment.

Continuing thanks to the College of Education for its generous support through Dean, James D. Anderson and unwavering support from national and regional sponsors such as the American Evaluation Association, WK Kellogg Foundation, Annie E. Casey Foundation, and Chicagoland Evaluation Association. CREA has and always will be the place where researchers, scholars and practitioners of evaluation and assessment can think outside the box of traditional orientations to ones more transformative, more equitable, more democratic, more critical, and more intersectional.

In contrast to narrow and false dichotomies and categories, this year’s conference recognizes the centrality of culture to evaluation and assessment and it illuminates the interdisciplinary landscape of a growing concentration of the field. No longer do we need to make a pitch for culturally responsiveness; it is fair to admit that the introduction of culturally responsive evaluation and assessment graces evaluation, assessment, and measurement professional associations, non-profit evaluator training opportunities, and classroom readings and bibliographies. Notably, it is also beginning to be seen in philanthropic and governmental RFPs and funded requests.

Still, the work is not done nor near completion. We have only just begun. Domestic and global tensions throughout our institutions exist and demand that we require intersectional as well as interdisciplinary lenses to address these tensions that pervade complex ecologies of evaluation and assessment. We expect another record number of attendees at this 5th International CREA conference and are excited about the opportunities to once again engage, listen to, and inform each other as a community while here in Chicago, so that we are more prepared to make a difference when we return home.

For now, welcome again and we hope you make this the best CREA ever!

All the best, SLH & RKH

College of Education
Terry Denny, Ph.D.
(June 6, 1930- November 1, 2018)

It is with deep sorrow but with gratitude that more than a few us in the CREA community and beyond mourn the death, while celebrating the life of our beloved mentor Dr. Terry Denny (Professor Emeritus Educational Psychology and Elementary and Early Childhood Education UIUC). TD was truly one of the significant patriarchs of what has now evolved as the CREA community since its early infancy in the late 1990’s. He was our teacher and mentor in the evaluation world as well as beyond for 40 years. As noted in the Encyclopedia of Evaluation (Sandra Mathison. Editor 2005)

“He spent 20 years working with Robert Stake, J. Thomas Hastings and other notables [e.g. Gordon Hoke and Ernie House] in and near the Center for Instructional Research and Curriculum Evaluation (CIRCE) at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. Although he wrote about educational evaluation and taught courses in educational evaluation, he claims he never conducted an educational evaluation. He wrote stories and advocated storytelling as a necessary precursor to research and evaluation. His message to the evaluation community was a simple one: no story, no evaluation. He thought most educational evaluators did not sufficiently understand the enterprise or the cultural context and because of this, did not know what or how to evaluate properly.”

His obituary accurately captures our collective sentiment:

“Denny taught a generation of UIUC students, whom he passionately mentored with a care and concern so powerful that they attest to him changing their lives. He would continue to follow their professional careers and families while providing counsel without counseling. For them, he modeled such caring with an unwavering conviction in the fight for justice and social responsibility.”

His work and contribution lives on in the work we do.
Once again, on behalf of Dublin City University, I am delighted to have been given the opportunity to convey my support for the annual conference of the Centre for Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment (CREA). The theme of this fifth conference in the series, “Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method and Practice: Moving Beyond Nominal Categories and False Dichotomies in Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment”, is one that has strong resonances for the DCU academic community. As a university, we are committed to re-imagining what we do and how we do it with a view to making our community one that is genuinely inclusive and welcoming for all. In previous years, I have mentioned the decision by DCU in 2016 to identify itself, and to pursue a formal designation, as a ‘University of Sanctuary’. The award of that designation is a public acknowledgement of our commitment to enhancing the life opportunities of those who have come to Ireland as immigrants, refugees and asylum seekers.

Our commitment to inclusion also underpins our decision to make DCU the world’s first autism-friendly University. The transformation of our educational community to one that supports and celebrates our students and staff who are on the autism spectrum has been a hugely positive experience. It has resulted in our adapting our University environment, raising awareness and acceptance, and building initiatives to make it as easy as possible for autistic community members to participate fully in all aspects of University life.

The creation of the University of Sanctuary and our commitment to creating an autism-friendly University has profoundly changed our community in positive ways and continues to challenge us to consider what we mean when we speak of the creation of a culture of welcome for all. We recognise that to do this we need to look beyond the confines of our own campuses and to work with likeminded institutions both nationally and internationally. In this context, it is important that we have an opportunity to draw on the wisdom and insight of the broad community of scholars and practitioners who make up CREA. We greatly value the strong links that we have forged with the University of Illinois and we regard events such as the CREA annual conference as being critically important in maintaining and enhancing these.

As in previous years, it is my sincere hope that this conference will prove to be a stimulating and challenging one. I am delighted that colleagues from EQI’s Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment group will represent DCU’s Institute of Education (IoE), and I particularly welcome the opportunity they will have to work with Prof Stafford Hood, an esteemed colleague and a DCU Adjunct Professor. I am conscious of the wide range of work that has been undertaken by EQI in areas of culturally responsive assessment and early school leaving in migrant populations through the EU-supported project ‘Aiding Culturally Responsive Assessment in Schools’ amongst others. It is my expectation that DCU attendees will return from the conference with a wide range of insights that can be shared with the broader DCU community.

Finally, I would like to offer my best wishes to you all for a stimulating, engaging and lively conference and I hope that we have the opportunity of welcoming you all to DCU at some stage in the not too distant future.

Brian MacCraith
President and Professor, Dublin City University
CREA Hawaii Welcome

The members of CREA-Hawai‘i (CREA-HI) are proud to be affiliated with CREA and to welcome you to the 5th CREA conference. CREA-HI was formed to convene evaluators who strive to advance culturally-responsive evaluation and assessment in Hawai‘i, with priority to working with Native Hawaiian communities. To this end, we have committed to the use of cultural lenses that promote aloha-based evaluation approaches that serve our diverse community.

The 2018 conference theme on Intersectionality, speaks to the need to “avoid prioritizing the needs of some over the conditions of others.” In Hawai‘i, we have a saying “Aloha aku, aloha mai” which calls upon us to recognize and respect the mana (spiritual energy) embedded in the land, in objects and forces, and in people. With this recognition of shared mana, what inevitably follows is the understanding of pilina (interconnectedness) and that when others thrive, our wellbeing is enhanced, when others fail to thrive, we are all diminished.

We look forward to engaging with you at the CREA conference and beyond to elevate and grow our shared mana and practice so we all may thrive. Aloha!

CREA Acknowledgments and Sponsors

I begin by once again expressing our sincere gratitude to the College of Education at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign for its financial, intellectual, and moral support since the establishment of CREA in 2011. Since that time a core group of faculty, administrators, and staff has provided consistent support for our collective vision for CREA as a researchers, scholars, and practitioners within the College of Education, across the United States (including Alaska and Hawaii), internationally (particularly Ireland and New Zealand), and Indigenous nations. It continues to be an honor to acknowledge Professor James D. Anderson as the Dean of our College of Education. Over his more than 40 years at UIUC as a professor, administrator, and mentor he has been instrumental in laying the foundation in the College of Education upon which CREA and its mission continues to build upon.

It is a privilege to extend my sincere thanks for the dedicated contributions by the CREA UIUC Core Personnel, CREA Affiliated Researchers, and members of our global CREA family. Their scholarly work, practice, leadership, and tireless efforts continue to advance our collective core mission in substantive ways. You know who you are. I would also be remiss not to mention what it has meant for CREA and this conference for longstanding CREA family member, Rodney Hopson to join us as a Professor of Educational Psychology in COE and CREA Senior Fellow and Associate Director. I have been able to breathe a little easier about preparations for the conference because of Rodney.

Our community continues to be fortunate for the sage counsel and multiple levels of support we receive from our distinguished elder (98 years young), Dr. Edmund W. Gordon. Dr. Gordon is the John M. Musser Professor of Psychology, Emeritus at Yale University, Richard March Hoe Professor, Emeritus of Psychology and Education, at Teachers College, Columbia University and Director Emeritus of the Institute for Urban and Minority Education (IUME) at Teachers College, Columbia University. At the same it must be mentioned that more than a few of us are saddened with the recent loss of Dr. Terry Denny (Professor Emeritus of Educational Psychology and Early Childhood UIUC) our beloved friend, mentor, and seminal scholar of “storytelling” in evaluation who transitioned this life in Savoy Illinois November 1, 2018. I know that I will not be alone in dedicating my work for this conference to his memory as my first evaluation teacher and cornerstone of what has evolved into what we now call the CREA community.

Sponsors and Affiliated Groups

CREA conveys its sincere thanks to the National Science Foundation, American Evaluation Association, W.K. Kellogg Foundation and the Annie E. Casey Foundation for their significant contributions to the success of our fifth international conference. The funding from NSF for the “Enhancing Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment Expertise at Selected HBCUs: a CASL-CREA Collaboration” preconference workshop and CREA’s partnership with the Center for Advancement of STEM Leadership takes another significant step to substantively advance our commitment to, as well as, collaboration with HBCUs and other minority serving institutions. We look forward to continuing this collaboration with CASL, CREA family member Dr. Melvin Hall, and Dr. Orlando Taylor. The W.K. Kellogg Foundation (WKKF) has once again provided support for a select group of first time attendees to our conference. However, this time the WKKF support makes it possible for a group of graduate and advanced undergraduate students from Minority Serving Institutions as well as underrepresented students from traditionally white institutions to be with us. Our thanks to Mr. Howard M. Walters (Planning, Evaluation, and Research Officer) for his vision to provide this opportunity that will nurture the CREA community of evaluators pipeline and beyond. Once again, we greatly appreciate the support from the Annie E. Casey Foundation with the assistance of Dr. Kantahyanee Murray (Senior Research Associate). We are also grateful for the support from our longstanding partner AEA. Our very special welcome to AEA Executive Director Anisha Lewis and President Dr. Tessie Tzavaras Catsambas as we look forward to working with both of them more in the future. Of course, we must also mention our CREA community neighbors, friends, and supporters, the Chicagoland Evaluation Association.

Fifth International Conference Team

The most thanks goes to the CREA’s Fifth International Conference Team. They have worked tirelessly through more tasks than I can mention or fully remember to make this conference happen. Their commitment, professionalism, and patience has been exemplary even when the challenges seemed to multiply sometimes daily. Tim Leyhe joined us this past summer as our first full-time Administrative Aide and has survived the intense baptism under fire in the preparation for this conference, two new federally funded evaluation projects, and of course the idiosyncrasies of CREA’s director. Debbie Morgan has once again provided much needed institutional memory for Tim and the rest of us regarding conference preparation to relieve some of the inevitable panic. The CREA Graduate Research Assistants include Marlon Mitchell who is a long-time member of the CREA family with Ahu Yolac and Shawn Hampton joining us this summer with very little time to get up to speed but as expected performed exceptionally in all they were asked to do. Your commitment and efforts to this conference and our community is a testament to who we are as a family. Thank you all.

Fifth International Conference Planning Committee

I would also like to thank the Fifth International Conference Planning Committee and Leadership Team for their thoughtful input, support, and standby readiness for the CREA call to duty.

“Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method and Practice: Moving Beyond Nominal Categories and False Dichotomies in Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment”

Purpose

Escalating domestic and global tensions in social, political, and economic institutions require that we urgently expand how we conceptualize our work, to end under-representation of the issues facing People of Color. When we frame the issues and opportunities that define our work, understanding intersectionality is essential if we are to avoid prioritizing the needs of some over the conditions of others. Too often we ignore the cumulative effect on those at the intersection of multiple sources of inequity. Refining our lens to see these issues more clearly is of paramount importance to culturally responsive practice.

Themes

The CREA 2019 theme of Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method and Practice will focus on the following areas as pertaining to program evaluation, measurement, and assessment:

- Problematizing arbitrary categories and false dichotomies
- Cultural responsiveness drawing upon multiple perspectives of meaning
- Reexamining professional practice to incorporate and promote intersectional understanding
- Policies and practices of influence and consequence in the quest for social justice
- Ethical challenges in maximizing justice with intersecting areas of inquiry
- Rejecting use of intersectionality to eclipse strategic examination of the component issues
CREA Fifth International Conference

Presenters Biographies:

Rodney K. Hopson is Professor, Department of Educational Psychology, College of Education, University of Illinois – Urbana Champaign.

He received his Ph.D. from the Curry School of Education, University of Virginia and has done post-doctoral/sabbatical studies in the Faculty of Education, University of Namibia, the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health and Centre of African Studies, Cambridge University. He served as President of the American Evaluation Association in 2012.

Dr. Hopson’s research interests lie in social politics and policies, foundations of education, sociolinguistics, ethnography, and evaluation. His work raises questions that 1) analyze and address the differential impact of education and schooling on marginalized and underrepresented groups in diverse global nation states and 2) seek solutions to social and educational conditions in the form of alternative paradigms, epistemologies, and methods for the way the oppressed and marginalized succeed and thrive despite circumstances and opportunities that suggest otherwise.

Karen E. Kirkhart is currently Professor and Director of the Baccalaureate Program, School of Social Work, David B. Falk College of Sport and Human Dynamics, Syracuse University.

Dr. Kirkhart is also an affiliated faculty member of the Center for Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment (CREA) at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign.

She has been active in the evaluation profession for over thirty-five years. She holds a Ph.D. in Social Work and Psychology from The University of Michigan, Dr. Kirkhart served as President of the American Evaluation Association in 1994. Her leadership has been recognized with the Robert Ingle Award for Outstanding Service to the AEA. Dr. Kirkhart’s scholarly contributions to multicultural validity, cultural competence in evaluation, and evaluation influence have been recognized by the AEA with the Paul F. Lazarsfeld Award for Outstanding Contribution to Evaluation Theory.

Paul Elam, Ph.D., Chief Strategy Officer, MPHIC

He is a skilled researcher with expertise in justice issues. He is a collaborative leader who brings an abiding commitment to diversity, inclusion, and equity to his public policy work. Dr. Elam has a wealth of knowledge and experience measuring racial and ethnic discrimination and believes that sound public policy analysis should include an examination of whether all people are being treated fairly and equitably. Dr. Elam directed a state-wide evaluation of the W.K. Kellogg Foundation Michigan Team's investments and used the Template for Analyzing Programs through a Culturally Responsive and Racial Equity Lens as part of the evaluation design.

Dr. Elam recently began assisting the Annie E. Casey Foundation with the Expanding the Bench Initiative. This initiative aims to improve evaluation science and social innovation by increasing diversity in the field of research and evaluation. Dr. Elam’s work will focus on evaluators from historically underrepresented groups with evaluation expertise in the areas of child welfare and juvenile justice. Dr. Elam is also a certified facilitator for the California Brief Multicultural Competence Scale (CMBCS) Multicultural Training Program.

Willard Walker, Affiliated Consultant

He has extensive experience working with workforce development, state policy, school-to-work, and race and diversity issues. Mr. Walker has provided training on issues of inclusion, equity, and diversity for the Lansing Board of Water & Light; coordinated an Employer Conference on Workplace Diversity in the Lansing area; and assisted in a crime analysis evaluation for the Michigan Department of Human Services, Bureau of Juvenile Justice. Mr. Walker led the work of developing the Template for Analyzing Programs through a Culturally Responsive and Racial Equity Lens in his work for the W.K. Kellogg Foundation Michigan Team Evaluation.

He has worked with clients to improve recruitment and retention of African-American teachers, including development of a coordinated recruitment planning process for urban districts. He conducted research to address the plight of young males of color in a project initiated through the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies.
LaShaune Johnson, Ph.D., Assistant Professor, Creighton University

She is an experienced researcher of online learning among pre-health professional students, breast cancer disparities, adult and adolescent obesity, and pediatric health literacy among immigrant/refugee populations. She is faculty in the Master of Public Health program, and in the Master of Medical Anthropology program. She is currently the co-chair of the Metro African American Breast Cancer Task Force in Omaha, Nebraska, and is the co-director of the “In Search of a Medical Home”, a culturally sensitive, Muslim community-based educator project in Central Missouri, funded by the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Society for Community Research and Action. She is one of the contributors of a recently published textbook, Social Capital and Community Well-Being, which is being used by the Serve Here Connecticut academic debt reduction program. She is also one of the contributors to an upcoming edited volume on Black LGBT health issues.

Dr. Johnson has employed novel community-based methods to support Omaha’s Adolescent Health Project developmental evaluation (participatory video) and another method (Photovoice) to investigate health services for obese patients in Connecticut and Nebraska. For the Breast Cancer Task Force, she co-designed a peer educator/advocate program; this program is in its second year and is expanding to add training for patient navigators. She is currently a member of the Building Healthy Futures Evaluation Advisory Board in Omaha. She was a member of the inaugural Annie E. Casey Foundation LEEAD (Leaders in Equitable Evaluation and Diversity) program.

Dr. Mindelyn Anderson currently serves as the Program Director of the Masters of Science in Measurement and Evaluation at American University and is the founder of Mirror Group LLC.

Most recently, she completed a Leaders in Equitable Evaluation and Diversity (LEEAD) Fellowship at the Annie E. Casey Foundation. Her previous higher education appointments include Honors Faculty in Residence and Assistant Professor of Sociology and African American Studies at Northeastern University and Marilyn Yarbrough Fellow at Kenyon College. Dr. Anderson has also held fellowships at American Institutes for Research and Mathematica Policy Research.

For 15 years, Dr. Anderson has researched social inequality and stratification, race and migration, education and social mobility. She has conducted evaluations with community-based, regional, national and international non-profit, for-profit, and educational organizations. Her utilization-focused, participatory evaluation practice is informed by Culturally-Responsive Evaluation and values diversity, equity, and inclusion as integral components of high quality evaluation. Her scholarship has been supported by sponsors including the National Science Foundation and National Endowment for the Humanities.

Leah C. Neubauer, EdD, is Assistant Professor of Preventive Medicine in the Division of Public Health Practice in the Feinberg School of Medicine at Northwestern University

Her primary area of scholarship is focused on applications of critical theory to curriculum development in the health-related professions and sciences both domestically and globally. She conducts collaborative global research specifically focused on the development, implementation and evaluation of school-based sexual and reproductive health programs. She employs multidisciplinary, theory-driven approaches to instruction and evaluation capacity-building within varied organizational structures through critical examinations of power. She holds leadership roles in the evaluation and public health education professional communities serving as: co-chair of the American Evaluation Association (AEA) Local Affiliate Collaborative (LAC), Association of Schools and Programs of Public Health (ASPPH) Appointed Scholarship of Teaching and Learning Task Force, and an accreditation Site Visit Chair with the Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH).
Andrea Guerrero-Guajardo (Cherokee/Tejano), Ph.D., MPH, is currently Director Community Engagement and Social Accountability at the University of the Incarnate Word School of Osteopathic Medicine.

Her approach to community-based medical education is firmly entrenched in the principles of community organizing and participatory decision making with the goal of developing local capacity and improved wellbeing. Her community-based work is focused on social determinants of health and community responsive evaluation that addresses disparities caused by social, political, and economic inequities within historically oppressed and marginalized populations. Dr. Guerrero-Guajardo works collaboratively with stakeholders at the local, state, and national levels to develop prudent public health policy and promote population health. She is an experienced trainer in these topics and was recognized by the Obama White House for her expertise and contributions to best practices for coalition building and community collaboration. Her leadership roles within the American Evaluation Association (AEA) supported Multi-Ethnic Issues in Evaluation and Latino Responsive Evaluation Discourse, and she was selected to be a 2013 Minority Serving Institutions (MSI) fellow at AEA. Dr. Guerrero-Guajardo lives in San Antonio with her husband, Ben, and their four children.

Olatokunbo (Toks) S. Fashola, (Ph.D.) Research in Residence/ Research Professor at American University

She is also a consulting Principal Research Scientist and Vice President for Evaluation at Mathematics Education Research Associates (MERA). She has expertise in randomized field trials (RFTs) and Quasi Experimental Designs and has served as principal investigator, evaluator, and advisor for several programs and program evaluations across the country. Her current research interests include STEM among underrepresented students in grades K-16, Resiliency theory, Resiliency theory in specialized settings, bilingual education and language and literacy acquisition, opportunities to learn during the non-school hours, culturally relevant program evaluation, and educating African American Males. She is also interested in college attendance and dropout prevention programs that work, early childhood education, and wraparound programs. Dr. Fashola uses mixed methods to conduct her research, which includes policy analysis, program evaluation, and culturally relevant evaluation and assessment.

Katherine Tibbetts, PhD., Director of Evaluation for the Queen Lili’uokalani Trust

As the director, she is responsible for building evaluation culture and capacity. Prior to her current appointment she conducted educational program evaluation and research at Kamehameha Schools. Her role there included technical support to Kamehameha School’s program staff and collaborators for program monitoring and evaluation, research related to the well-being of Native Hawaiians, and innovations in culturally responsive research and evaluation. She is also currently working with the Center for Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment affiliate in Hawai’i and the articulation of a Hawaiian-culture-based evaluation framework as part of a larger group of evaluators who work in Native Hawaiian contexts. She has a PhD in Educational Psychology from the University of Hawai’i at Mānoa and has experience teaching evaluation- and research-related courses. Kathy is a founding member of the American Evaluation Association’s Indigenous Peoples in Evaluation TIG and of the Hawaii-Pacific Evaluation Association (an AEA Affiliate), a former chair of the AEA Diversity Committee, and one of the authors of the AEA Public Statement on Cultural Competence in Evaluation. She also contributed to chapters on indigenous perspectives on assessment and evaluation in Indigenous Educational Models for Contemporary Practice: In our Mother’s Voice and in Na Lau Lama. She led the team responsible for producing Ka Huaka’i: 2014 Native Hawaiian Educational Assessment. Most recently, she served as co-editor of the Indigenous Evaluation issue of New Directions for Evaluation. She also served as the AEA representative on the Joint Committee for Standards in Educational Program Evaluation from 2010 through 2018.
Fiona Cram, Ph.D., Katoa Ltd

Fiona (Ngāti Pāhauwera) is the mother of one son, and has a PhD from the University of Otago (Social and Developmental Psychology). She has over 20 years of Kaupapa Māori (by Māori, for Māori) research and evaluation experience with Māori and Iwi organizations and communities, as well as with government agencies, district health boards, and philanthropic organizations. A large portion of this work involves the use of mixed or multiple methods in the pursuit of decolonization, tribal sovereignty, and societal transformation. Her current evaluation work includes the evaluation of a service supporting young Māori mothers into sustainable education, and a 10-year longitudinal study of Māori and Pasifika student success. Fiona has recently completed and published papers on the findings from a longitudinal qualitative study of young Māori mothers (E Hine), and authored chapters in the 2015 Oxford Handbook of Mixed and Multiple Methods Research.

Joan LaFrance, EdD., Owner of Mekinak Consulting

Mekinak Consulting is an evaluation service in Seattle, Washington specializing in educational program evaluation, research, and management studies. She is a member of the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa. Mekinak Consulting has a long history of evaluation of programs in Tribal Colleges and Universities, tribal and Indigenous communities, and for non-profit organizations. With support from the National Science Foundation (NSF) through a grant to the American Indian Higher Education Consortium she conducted the research and co-authored the book Indigenous Evaluation Framework: Telling Our Story in Our Place and Time. In addition to her ongoing work in American Indian tribal communities, she is working projects in the United States Affiliated Pacific Islands to assess culturally relevant science and mathematics programs. She was a founding member of the Indigenous Peoples in Evaluation AEA Topical Interest Group, and former Chair of the AEA Diversity Committee. She has taught research and evaluation methods in graduate programs and has experience in municipal budgeting, program development and management, and curriculum development. She has published several articles and chapters on Indigenous evaluation and, most recently, was a co-editor for the New Directions in Evaluation volume on Indigenous Evaluation. Joan received her doctorate Harvard University, and a Master of Public Administration from the University of Washington.

Donna M Mertens, (Ph.D.) Professor Emeritus at Gallaudet University

Gallaudet University is a university with a mission to serve Deaf and hard of hearing students. Mertens developed the transformative approach to evaluation as a response to concerns raised by members of marginalized communities about the harm done when evaluations are designed without considering issues of discrimination and social, environmental and economic justice. Mertens published Mixed Methods Design in Evaluation (2018) with Sage and Program Evaluation Theory and Practice (2nd ed.) (2019) with Guilford Press. She served as the editor of the Journal of Mixed Methods Research for 5 years and chaired the Mixed Methods International Research Association's task force on the future of mixed methods: challenges and opportunities 2015-2016. She is an active evaluator and currently engaged in the enterprise across a variety of settings. She held long-term leadership positions in AEA, including the presidential position 1997-1999 and the Board 2000-2002. She continues to serve as an advisor to AEA's diversity fellowship program through subsequent years.
Foundations of Culturally Responsive Evaluation
Tuesday 9:00 am – 5:00 pm in Spire Parlor
Presenters:
Rodney Hopson, PhD., Professor University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign
Karen Kirkhart, PhD., Professor, Syracuse University

Workshop Description: This workshop addresses theoretical foundations of Culturally Responsive Evaluation (CRE) and the strategies that operationalize it in evaluation practice. It is delivered as a conversation between presenters and among participants. Following opening introductions, we will set the context with a reflection on the relevance of diversity, equity and intersectionality in the current moment of our country and where the evaluation profession sits within that. Against this backdrop, we highlight the history of CRE’s development and identify key theoretical elements.

The workshop then transitions from theory to practice in three segments. The first segment pairs analysis of evaluation contexts with reflections on one’s own cultural location as an evaluator. This prepares us for the second segment, which considers methods that are culturally congruent with their contexts of practice, noting potential strengths and limitations of each. CRE values the return of benefit to the community, and the third segment examines both methods and issues in communicating findings. We pair examples from the literature with your own examples as participants to connect workshop content with your contexts, interests, and concerns. In closing the workshop, we will return to fundamental issues such as grounding CRE in social justice and how this location poses important meta-evaluation questions that connect to both ethics and validity.

Utilization of a Racial Equity Lens to help Guide Strategic Engagement and Evaluation
Tuesday 9:00 am – 5:00 pm in Millenium Parlor
Presenters:
Paul Elam, Ph.D., Chief Strategy Officer, MPHI
LaShaune Johnson, Ph.D., Assistant Professor, Creighton University
Mindelyn Anderson, Ph.D., Program Director, American University

Workshop Description: The field of evaluation is being challenged to move from the traditional role of evaluation, and its perceived role of objectivity, to a process that considers who is being evaluated and who is conducting the evaluation. Over the past three years, Public Policy Associates, Inc. (PPA) has worked to develop useful frameworks, tools, and approaches that evaluators could consider to focus on the ways that race and culture might influence an evaluation process; this has resulted in the development of a framework for conducting evaluation using a racial equity lens.

This workshop focuses on the practical use of a racial equity lens when conducting evaluation. The framework argues that culture and race are important considerations when conducting an evaluation because we believe that there are both critical and substantive nuances that are often missed, ignored, and/or misinterpreted when an evaluator is not aware of the culture of those being evaluated.
Narrative and Collaborative Inquiry in Culturally Responsive Evaluation: Exploring Critical Methods in Practice

Tuesday 8:00 am – 12:00 Noon in Hancock Parlor

Presenters:
Leah C. Neubauer, EdD, MA, Assistant Professor, Northwestern University
Andrea Guajardo, PhD, MPH, Director of Community Engagement and Social Accountability, University of the Incarnate Word

Workshop Description: This workshop will focus on critical methodologies and methods in culturally responsive evaluation. Participants will be introduced to the theoretical and methodological foundations of critical, narrative and collaborative inquiry and their applicability in culturally responsive evaluation. The co-presenters will facilitate a whole-person learning environment by engaging participants in a variety of activities designed to enhance their observational skills. Following the foundational primer and interactive activities, the session will focus on applying four critical methodologies and corresponding methods to culturally responsive evaluation case studies in community health and education: narrative inquiry, testimonio, cooperative inquiry, and collaborative inquiry. These case studies are situated in communities of color – representing underrepresented racial and ethnic minority groups in Chicago and San Antonio (USA). The applied, analytical activities illustrate how knowledge and lived experiences of the oppressed or marginalized are validated when they become part of the evaluation process while explicitly recognizing multiple forms of knowledge that exists in communities of color. Aligned with the conference theme of intersectionality, the activities call attention socially-stratified intersectional understanding, action-oriented praxis, and justice-focused-policy. Individual experiences shared during this process create an intervalidated collective consciousness that represents larger communities which occupy space at the margins of society and challenge dominant methodologies that rationalize inequity, dominance and superiority. Strategies for creating space for critical methodologies as a means of pursuing social and racial justice will be addressed. Participants should come prepared to share their experiences, engage in dialogue, and contribute to individual and group learning, un-learning and skill-building.

Culturally Relevant Evaluation and Research from a Quantitative Perspective

Tuesday 8:00 am – 12:00 Noon in Dearborn 3
Presenter: Toks Fashola, PhD., Professor, American University

Workshop Description: This workshop addresses the importance of culturally relevant evaluation and assessment tools specifically related to STEM. This workshop addresses the use of these tools in nurturing and expanding the pipeline of underrepresented minorities. It does this by exploring constructs, theories, and methods for evaluating STEM knowledge acquisition both inside and outside the classroom in K-16 settings.

Indigenous Evaluation Caucus

Tuesday 1:00 pm - 5:00 pm in Water Tower Parlor
Presenters:
Katherine Tibbetts, PhD., Lili’uokalani Trust
Fiona Cram, PhD., Katoa Ltd.
Joan LaFrance, EdD., Mekinak Consulting

Workshop Description: Evaluation in Indigenous contexts is gaining more visibility and broader recognition among Indigenous evaluators, other evaluators practicing in Indigenous communities, and—arguably most importantly—among key stakeholders in those communities. A key milestone for evaluation practitioners was the publication of the first issue of New Directions in Evaluation focused exclusively on Indigenous Evaluation.
The co-editors of the Indigenous Evaluation volume will facilitate this session intended to strengthen and broaden our community of practice. Participants will engage in a modified Appreciative Inquiry process to describe the progress we’ve made in defining and advancing the practice and acceptance of indigenous evaluation, in crafting a shared vision for the future, and identifying steps that will help us achieve this vision.

The results of the session will be documented for all participants, used as input for updates to the CREA strategic plan, and may be submitted for publication.

Transformative Mixed Methods Designs in Evaluation for Social, Environmental and Economic Justice
Tuesday 1:00 pm - 5:00 pm in Hancock Parlor

Presenter:
Donna M Mertens, Professor Emeritus, Gallaudet University

Workshop Description: Developments in the use of mixed methods have extended beyond the practice of combining surveys and focus groups. The sophistication of transformative mixed methods designs in evaluation will be explained and demonstrated through illustrative culturally responsive examples taken from diverse sectors and geographical regions. Transformative mixed methods designs will include applications for determining the effectiveness of interventions and conducting policy evaluation. Participants will have the opportunity to create transformative mixed methods designs using evaluation vignettes for each type of evaluation. The workshop will be divided into 4 sections. First, the concepts of transformation; social, economic, and environmental justice, and intersectionality will be explored in the context of culturally responsive evaluations. Second, the basic vocabulary of mixed methods design will be explained and transformative mixed methods design will be put into the context of evaluation work. Third, transformative mixed methods designs will be explained and demonstrated for the purpose of determining an intervention’s effectiveness. The participants will be given an evaluation vignette and asked to develop a mixed methods design. Fourth, this process will be repeated for the purpose of using transformative mixed methods designs for policy evaluation.

March 27
Evening Keynote

Eric J. Jolly, Ph.D.
President and CEO, Saint Paul & Minnesota Community Foundations

In his role as president and chief executive officer of The Saint Paul & Minnesota Community Foundations, Eric J. Jolly, Ph.D., continues his lifelong work to educate, elevate, and give voice to people in his communities. The Saint Paul & Minnesota Community Foundations match diverse charitable resources with community-led solutions. Jolly began leading The Foundations in August 2015 and is forging meaningful, lasting partnerships with nonprofit leaders and donors in the community to create a stronger, healthier and more equitable Minnesota. Before joining The Saint Paul & Minnesota Community Foundations, Jolly was president of the Science Museum of Minnesota for a decade. Jolly went to Saint Paul after serving as vice president and senior scientist at the Education Development Center in Massachusetts. Before that he worked as a professor and administrative leader in successive academic roles. Jolly serves on a number of local and national boards, including the Bush Foundation, Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology and Greater MSP. Jolly is a member of honor societies, including Sigma Xi, Phi Eta Sigma, Mortarboard and Golden Key. He is also a life member of the Society for Advancement of Chicanos and Native Americans in Science.

Margaret Beale Spencer, Ph.D.
Marshall Field IV Professor of Urban Education, Department of Comparative Human Development, University of Chicago.

Dr. Margaret Beale Spencer is the Marshall Field IV Professor of Urban Education and Chairperson in the Department of Comparative Human Development at the University of Chicago. Previously, she was the endowed Board of Overseers Professor and Director of the Interdisciplinary Studies of Human Development (ISHD) faculty member in the Graduate School of Education at the University of Pennsylvania. Additionally, she was Director of the University of Pennsylvania’s Center for Health Achievement Neighborhood Growth and Ethnic Studies (CHANGES), and also guided as its inaugural director, the W. E. B. Du Bois Collective Research Institute. Professor Spencer’s Phenomenological Variant of Ecological Systems Theory (P-VEST) provides an identity-focused cultural ecological perspective. It serves as the foundation for her gender, culture and context acknowledging, developmental race and ethnicity sensitive research emphasis. The conceptual framework addresses resiliency, identity, and competence formation processes for diverse humans—particularly youth—both in the United States and abroad.
