(Pre-conference workshops – Tuesday, March 26)

CALL FOR PAPERS

June 15 - September 15, 2018

Conference Theme

Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method, and Practice: Beyond Categories and Dichotomies in Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment

Dr. Stafford Hood
Director, Center for Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment

Hosted by the College of Education at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign
PURPOSE

Escalating domestic and global tensions in our social, political, and economic institutions urgently require that we expand how we conceptualize our work, so that it does not perpetuate underrepresenting the issues facing People of Color. When we frame the issues and opportunities that define our work, understanding intersectionality is essential if we are to avoid inadvertently prioritizing the needs of some over the conditions of others.

THEMES

The CREA 2019 theme of Intersectionality as Critical Inquiry, Method and Practice will focus on the following areas as pertaining to program evaluation, measurement, and assessment:

- Problematizing arbitrary categories and false dichotomies
- Cultural responsiveness drawing upon multiple perspectives of meaning
- Reexamining professional practice to incorporate and promote intersectional understanding
- Policies and practices of influence and consequence in the quest for social justice
- Ethical challenges in maximizing justice with intersecting areas of inquiry
- Rejecting use of intersectionality to eclipse strategic examination of the component issues (For example, examination of gender & race intersection should not dilute the strength of inquiry into each component)

The 2019 CREA conference issues a call for papers that demonstrate the ways in which intersectionality illuminates our understanding of education, health care, criminal justice, social services and workforce issues.

Papers are invited that address one or more of the following:

1. Reports of interventions—We invite papers that describe interventions/programs addressing a particular type of inequity primarily including discussions of outcomes and impacts.

2. Development of an intersectional evidence base—We invite papers that discuss new ways of thinking about evidence of effectiveness and program impact within interventions that target people of color including indigenous and tribal specific communities.

3. Theories of change that incorporate an intersectional perspective—We invite papers that explore the plausibility and testability of various theories of change that address inequities in specific, local or global circumstances.

4. Instrumentation—We invite papers that address issues in the development of measures and indicators that are sensitive to capturing changes in underrepresented individuals and communities that are targeted in programs and interventions.

5. Critical reflection—We invite papers that deconstruct dynamics of power and privilege surrounding evaluation and assessment while closely examining the cultural location of our work as well as its ethical and moral complexities given intersectional considerations.

Paper

Paper presentations are individual paper submissions (with one or multiple authors). In paper sessions, authors present abbreviated versions of their papers, followed by comments/critique if there is a discussant, and audience discussion. A discussant (or discussants) should be included as part of a paper session only if a discussant’s expertise can add to the understanding of the papers. Papers submitted individually will be grouped with others on a common theme and will be allocated 15 minutes as part of either a 45 or 90 minute session. A typical structure for a session with three or four papers allows approximately 5 minutes for the chair’s introduction to the session, 15 minutes per author presentation, 10 minutes of critique, and 15 minutes of discussion. Abstracts for papers are limited to 250-500 words. Abstracts shorter than 250 words or longer than 500 words will not be reviewed.

Roundtable Session

Roundtable sessions allow maximum interaction among presenters and with attendees. Roundtables are 45-minute oral presentations with discussion with attendees seated around a table. Roundtable presentations typically include 15 minutes of presentation, followed by 30 minutes of discussion and feedback. Roundtable presenters should bring targeted questions to pose to others at the table in order to learn from and with those attending. Roundtables are an ideal format for networking and in-depth discussion on a particular topic. The abstract should detail the focus of the presentation and the way(s) in which it contributes to the body of knowledge in the field of culturally responsive evaluation and assessment. Because of the physical configuration of this type of session, no additional audiovisual equipment, such as a screen or LCD projector, is provided. Authors wishing to display information may do so from their own laptop computer screens. If you plan to use a laptop, please be sure the battery is charged, as power source will not be provided. Abstracts for roundtables are limited to 250-500 words. Abstracts shorter than 250 words or longer than 500 words will not be reviewed.

Symposium

A symposium provides an opportunity to examine specific research issues, problems, or topics from a variety of perspectives. Symposia may present alternative solutions, interpretations, or contrasting points of view on a specified subject or in relation to a common theme. Symposia also use a panel discussion format targeted at a clearly delineated research issue or idea. Symposia may be quite interactive: A large portion of the session may be devoted to activities such as discussion among the presenters and discussants, questions and discussion among all those present at the session, or small-group interaction. Innovative formats (e.g., town meetings) can be proposed under this rubric. Papers submitted together as a symposia session will be assigned either to a 45-minute slot (for two papers) or a 90-minute slot (for more than two papers). Session submissions for symposia are limited to five (5) participants for 90-minute sessions. The number of participants includes presenters and any discussants. These limits are in addition to the chair. The proposer should allocate time among the multiple papers that ensures an opportunity for audience questions.

Abstracts for a symposium are limited to 250 words for a session summary and 250 words for each paper included within the symposia. No more than 4 papers can be submitted for a single symposium. Symposia sessions submitted intact will be reviewed as a set and the full set will be accepted or rejected together. Paper abstracts should detail the focus of the paper and the way(s) in which it contributes to the body of knowledge in the field of culturally responsive evaluation and assessment.
The Center for Culturally Responsive Evaluation and Assessment (CREA) at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign is located at the College of Education, Bureau of Educational Research. It is an interdisciplinary endeavor that brings researchers together from across the College and University, as well as domestic and international research partners, to address the growing need for policy-relevant studies that take seriously the influences of cultural norms, practices, and expectations in the design, implementation, and evaluation of social and educational interventions.
